GANs are models that generate new, realistic data by learning from existing data.

GAN consists of two neural networks the generator and the discriminator trained adversarially, where the generator tries to fool the discriminator and the discriminator tries to distinguish real from fake data.